

Turkish war crimes uncovered in mass graves in Cyprus

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

The Turkish army has been accused of war crimes during its illegal invasion in 1974 of Cyprus, which has provoked Greek Cypriots to prepare law suits to prosecute Turkey for war crimes. Following the discovery of human remains in a mass grave confirmed using DNA evidence to be the bodies of five Greek-Cypriot soldiers who appeared in an “iconic” photograph depicting the ferocious military attack instigated by Turkish troops on the Mediterranean island.

The families of the Greek Cypriots have said that the evidence found in the mass graves of the bodies to be that of the men presumed missing for 35 years, were in fact murdered in the custody of Turkish troops.

“It’s a cold-blooded execution,” Andreas Hadjikyriakos, a brother of one of the soldiers told Cyprus state TV. “I can never accept this.” (Associated Press)

The Associated Press in a report said: \(περισσότερα...\)